SEO-Friendly Title

There is no denying that title is also a ranking factor and played an important role to rank your content higher in search results. For example, your content is ranked at the top of the Google search results page and your competitor is next to you. If your competitor's title is optimized well and more users click through it then Google will likely move you down and your competitor's content will be at the top of the page.

To avoid this daydreaming, be sure to include your keyword in the title and also avoid keyword stuffing. Stick to one keyword first then you can try to mix two keywords naturally.

Make Use of Numbers

Did you click through this post if I wrote the title like this- "Free and Creative Blog Title Generator Tools", Ah I know, you won't Numbers provide measurable information and it appeals to readers that this post will help you know about 10 blog title generator tools that are free of cost. And if you're writing a listicle post then I would recommend including numbers in your title.

Keep Simple & Short

Whenever possible be sure to keep the title simple and short. You don't require extra creativity that confuses your readers which results in a bounce rate and your reader will never come back to your site.

The short title always works and Google also trims your title if it exceeds more than 60 characters, so it's better to be concise in writing a headline.
